Kaisermutt Translation Notes

Thanks again to Watawheel for the raws.

The page 14 line is, in part キラリちゃんが救う方が万倍重要 (Kirari-chan saving is 10000 times more important) This baffles me, Kirari-chan is clearly the subject of 救う, so she's the one doing the saving. Are they rooting for her to win? Also I went with better rather than more important for typesetting reasons.

On page 16 she says 天国 (tengoku, heaven) with the furigana ヘイヴン (heivun), which is normally read haven. Heaven starts with a short syllable (ヘブン (hebun) or ヘヴン (hevun))

On page 21 she says 逝っちゃった with the furigana イ. The kanji 逝 is usually for pass away, but adding the katakana furigana gives it a sexual connotation. So I had to think of a word for splooging your glooge that also doubles as a death euphemism. Thankfully these are the two concepts with the most euphemisms in English.

The moonlight blast is just 月光丸 (gekkougan, moonlight [circle/bullet]) without any pun.

On page 37 飛礫 (tsubute) got normal furigana. I think this is the first time I've seen regular furigana in this manga. I think this is the first non-jouyou kanji I've run into.

On page 42 if she hadn't put it in quotation marks I would have put living in the moment, but because of the parallel structures and quotation marks it felt like I'd be losing to much by using moment instead of now.

This would have come out a few days earlier if I didn't get the new Pokemon. I haven't played Pokemon since middle school but the new one is great.
